

The Road of Golden Stars

House to house
ghosts trudge occupied by nobody's business.
Passers-by avert their gaze, yet they all see.
These were once friends,
colleagues and loved ones.
Since the stars fell shame has been bestowed by a patch.

It's easier to be blind to the branded doors
And insults thrown with fists.
On this road live creatures no longer human,
drifting from place to place in search of a séance
to reconnect them with the world and save them from the road of golden stars.

Dominic Gilmour